UK borders and migration policy

Why did a peer say: 'Saying a dog is a cat doesn't make it such. It may be your opinion, but it isn't true'? The House of Lords has been scrutinising the Rwanda Bill line-by-line, with critique from across all party affiliations. During the debate, it was argued 'allies' who supported the British troops overseas should be exempt from removal to Rwanda. Next the Lords will vote on the proposed amendments before the Bill returns to the House of Commons, which could pass into law by the end of March. Separately, the Joint Committee on Human Rights, a cross-party parliamentary committee, declared the Rwanda policy as incompatible with human rights safeguards that could damage the UK's reputation. It said the courts are the most appropriate place to determine the safety of Rwanda, rather than in legislation. (Sources: The Standard, BBC, UK Parliament)

The Home Office is reportedly planning to pay Albanian ‘influencers’ on TikTok to discourage people from crossing the Channel in a small boat, as part of a bigger social media campaign of deterrence. (Source: ITV)

Six people were taken to hospital when migrants were found in the back of a lorry arriving in East Sussex from France. One person was arrested on suspicion of ‘facilitating illegal entry to the UK’; a second person was arrested for ‘illegally entering the UK’. (Source: Sky News)

‘What I see, all the time, is waste of human capital’ - the outgoing Chief Inspector of Borders has criticised the government for obstructing inspections, being unwilling to learn lessons and having no asylum housing strategy. Assessments of the Afghan resettlement schemes (dated June 2023) and the use of hotels for unaccompanied children (dated November 2023) are two of 14 completed inspection reports awaiting publication by the Home Office.
